Where COVID and Cyber Collide

With employees and companies working from home en masse, technology tools that enable this arrangement to work (e.g. video conferencing platforms) have both been an efficiency boon and a security bane for companies, creating further exposures and threats in this space. What has transpired and what to expect next?

The Day After COVID-19

Before the world has even got a grip on the pandemic and economic collision, we have geopolitical tensions looming in the horizon and coming up fast. And that's without even mentioning oil prices! If economists are clairvoyant, now would be a good time to find out. Let's hear what economists have to say as we head into 2021.

The Asian Captive Conference 2020: Finding a Soft Landing in a Hard Market

Self-insurance is often (mis)construed as a panacea to all the woes of a hardening insurance market, especially when exacerbated by a global pandemic. Without the right risk management approach and appropriate reinsurance protection, it could well be a Pandora's box instead.

CLOSING PLENARY

Closing Plenary - Heading into the Unknown

A risk manager, a broker, and an insurer walk into a room - and that's where the conversation starts! Thomas Buberl, CEO of AXA Group, and Dan Glaser, CEO of Marsh & McLennan Companies, field questions crowdsourced from the risk community of PARIMA and filtered through the lens of Franck Baron, Chairman of PARIMA.
